NOTES AND COMMENTS.

- THE TRANSVAAL. From the Reuter's telegram which publish to day it would indeed appear as war with the Transvaal was a foregone conclusion. We do not think that ten thousand men would be despatched to Natal unless the Cabinet was assurred that they were required, nor do we think that orders would have been issued for Indian troops to be held in readiness until all hopes of a peaceable solution to the difficulty with the | will see plenty of spare bunks, ample space Boer republic were practically at an end. for everything and everybody, the culinary Natal, being adjacent to the Transvaal and arrangements are complete and far better possessed of the port of Durban through than those to which British soldiers are which a great proportion of the Transvaal treated when en voyage, while everything trade passes, must naturally feel somewhat anxious and apprehensive of a Boer attack upon the American, soldiers going by the and hence, doubtless, her appeal for troops. | vessel. From the report of the proceeeings of the Volksraad it would appear that, KRUGER or no KRUGER, the Boers are bent upon war and the moderation urged by the President was, in all probability, not so much from a desire to avoid hostilities as from policy, in order that he might have his words to fall back upon in the event of the Boers suffering a reverse. His repudiation of British Suzerainty in itself would be sufficient ground for a declaration of war on our part and his concluding statement, to the effect that he placed his trust in God, evidently shows that his own hopes of a peaceable solution of the difficulty, were slight indeed. One thing is certain, and that is that President KRUGER by his vaccilating policy during the recen negotiations, his making a concession one day, or promising to de so, and withdrawing it the next, has alienated from the Boers what little sympathy was felt for them in England. Many people thought that to make war on the Transvaal over the questions at here. issue would be a criminal act, but during the last few weeks their views upon the subject appear to have undergone a great change.

UNHAPPY FRANCE. It is truly pitiable to see the depths of degradation to which the once mighty French nation has fallen. As we before pointed out, their boasted "Liberty, Equality and Fraternity" is non-existent and now Honour and Justice appear to have deserted them or wall . They informate . Dreyfuse whose trial, cendemnation, imprisonment, torture and re-trial have filled the French journals for a considerable period, hasbeen once again sacrificed for the so-called honour of the Army. How can honour exist in an army that is known to be so horribly corrupt as that of France? The mere suggestion of it is contemptible. It was not to the advantage of the Army that DREYFUS should be acquitted; his acquittal would have meant that others, and those others occupying high positions, would have had their fair fame trampled in the mud, and so-DREYFUS, innocent, as all right-minded men consider him to be, is once more sacrificed to the honour of the Army. To the French Army t may seem right that one, and that one only a captain, should be sacrificed to the good of the others, especially when those others are generals and persons in high positions, but to the ordinary Englishman such a thing is detestible. It is,acknowledged that to save the lifes of many it is justifiable to sacrifice one, but when only the honour of dishonourable, persons is concerned this axiom does not apply. The fact of the matter is that there is now no France; her place has been taken by the French Army.

THE PLAGUE AT NEWCHWANG. The telegram from our Shanghai correspondent which we publish to-day shows what a great danger is to be apprehended from plague in a Chinese city. The Russian doctor sent to investigate matters reports that there are two thousand coffins, all containing plague corpses, awaiting transportation to the provinces, and it is not difficult to imagine what the effect of the removal of these remains will be. The coffins will be spread broadcast over northern China and will carry the germs of the discase with them, leaving plague in their track and introducing this deadly disease into hitherto healthy villages. From these centres the disease will probably spread in all directions and we may expect next year to have an epidemic of plague in northern China such as has not been known in history. Is it not time that steps were taken to stop such criminal negligence and folly? It is not only the Chinese that will suffer by it, for trade will be paralysed; thousands will be ruined and in all probability many Europeans will fall victims to the disease, and all on account of the Chinaman's ignorance and disregard of the most elementary principles of sanitary precaution, Even in Hongkong we have had cases of plague corpses being smuggled on board steamers and unless adequate precautions arc taken the outbreak at. Newchwang may. well infect the whole of the northern Treaty

THE "TARTAR."

During the last day or two we have heard White Seal Capsule - - - 14,40 | many complaints of the overcrowded state of the chartered transport Tartar which is conveying twelve hundred American Volunteers to the United States. We were to-day shown a letter which, we are told, is

As a matter of fact everything is overstated. H.M.S. W. was put into commission to The Tartar is a vessel litted for the carrying of about 2,000 passengers. For years she did duty between Southampton and the Cape. At present she belongs to the Cana? dian Pacific Steamship Company, but is under charter to the U.S. Government As a transport she carries a double crew. Because the "volunteer regulars" were not given first class passages, given cabins to themselves, etc., they "growled." An interview with two or three of the American military officers now in port placed matters on a different basis to that suggested above. Captain-Surgeon SMITH, of the 20th Kansas, whose regiment the Tartar carries, states that the whole of the accommodation is perfect. Every officer in the Kansas regiment does the same, the only trouble being caused by the men who have got their discharges who are on board, numbering some 408. Altogether there are about 1108 men aboard; a number for which there is ample room. British trooper of similar tonnage would probably convey about twice the number. Anyhow, anyone wishing to invistigate the matter can do no better than visit her as she lies at anchor in the harbour. There they bespeaks the utmost care being bestowed

INTERNATIONAL SHOOTING

VICTORY FOR THE-HONGKONG VOLUNTEERS.

The assertion made by the American soldiers that in the struggle against the Philipinos they were greatly handicapped by the great inferiority of the Springheld time with which they were armed to their opponents Mausers was simply demonstrated in a friendly shooting match between the 20th Kansas Volunteers and the Hongkong Volunteers. The match was fired on the Association Range, the Americans firing with their own Springfield tifles and our own volunteers using the Lee-Metford, old Martini-Henry carbine and the Martini-Enfield carbine, the last weapon being the latest pattern having the Martini block and an improved. barrel. The difference between the Enfield and Metford barrel being that the former has only five grooves as rifling instead of seven as in the letter. The weather was almost perfect for rifle shooting and also for the spectators, of whom there were a great number, the hills on either side of the range being covered with sightseers. Many of the H.K.V. officers were also present, among whom were Major Chapman, Uaptain Saunders, Lieutenants Maitland, Stewart, Fullerton, Underwood and Duncan, the last named being responsible for the comfort of the visitors, in which pleasant duty he was ably assisted by all present, a portable buffet being erected where the competitors and their friends were treated with the well-known hospitality of the Hongkong Volunteers. Major Chapman, in a few well chosen words, expressed great satisfaction at seeing the American and British Volunteers lying down together shooting, he believed it was the first International shooting competitors and he hoped it would not be the last. He sympathised with their opponents as he could not claim the victory on account of being superior. marksmen as it was mainly due to the rough usage the rifles opposed to them had

LOSS OF THE "WHITE THE SHIP'S SIDE CAVES IN

SAFETY OF CAPTAIN RAYMOND. Amongst the vessels recently sent to Manila for the United States Government was the old While Cloud, until the other day, very-well known on the Canton run. The White Cloud was a wooden paddle steamer of 744 tops and was built at Hongkong in 1875 by the West Point Slipway and Dock Company, her engines being supplied by J. Howenden & Co., of Glasgow. She was recently purchased from the Hongkong Canton and Macao Steamboat Company for $14,000, by Mr. Robinson, of Manila, who has of late purchased several vessels to send to Manila for the United States command of Captain Raymond, who has taken a lot of small craft to Manila most successfully, and had on board 500 tons of coal, 1,000 fowls and 1,000 baskets of potatoes. All went well until the vessel had got about ninety miles from here; the weather was calm but a heavy swell was running and she began to labour heavily and to dlp her bows into it. Then the forward deck-planking commenced to carry away and Captain Raymond and his crew made preparations to effect repairs, but before anything could be done the port-side of the vessel began to give way to the weight of the swell. Two boats were lowered and the captain with half the crew, entered one, the rest of the crew going in the other under the command of the mate. The two boats pushed of and stood by to watch events and had scarcely got clear of the ship when the whole of the port side was seen to collapse, the vessel took a plunge and sank. Captain Raymond's boat was picked up by a junk some two hours afterwards and he arrived in Hongkong with his men at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon. The mate's boat was last seen heading for a junk in the distance, so it is presumed that he and the men with him are safe and will be landed here in due time. Captain Raymond attributes the loss of the ship to the fact of her old age and that she was badly riddled by white We understand that she was uninsured and that the loss amounts to $20,000.

MR. FOREMAN'S BOOK! TO THE EDITOR OF THE "HONGKONG TELEGRAPH" Str.-I am taking the liberty of asking you to publish some correspondence that has passed between Mr. John Foreman and myself, relative to certain objectionable statements that were made in his new edition of his book on the Philippine Islands.

Very respectfully yours, ROUNSEVELLE WILDMAN Hongkong, September 11th, 1899.

Hongkong, 10th June, 1899. John Foreman, Esq., Care Messrs. Scribner and Sons, Publishers-New York City.

New Edition of your work on the Philippine Islands. On page 567 I find the following sentence "the American Consul in Hongkong, Mr. Wildman, accepted the honorary post of Treasurer of the Patriotic League Fund." This is absolutely false, I never was Treasurer of it or of any Association in the world, and neither have I ever heard of the "Patriotic League Your statement is nothing more or less than Libel, and tends to damage my official character. Had not Mr. Spencer Pratt already obtained an order of the Court stopping the sale of your book, I should have done so. On page 568 occurs the following statement "Consul General Pratt thereupon Bent Emelio Aguinaldo with his Staff to Hongkong with instructions to Consul Wildman to put him in communication with Commodore Dewey, which he did, and Commodore Dewey, before he left China for Manila, gave orders to Consul General Wildman, to see that Aguinaldo and his Staff followed on an American War Ship." While this statement may not have been intended to be malicious, it is historically incorrect (see my Dispatch No. 83 page 336 of the "President's Message to Congress on the treaty of Peace between the United States and Spain)." If you had taken as much pains to have looked into the American Documents relating to the War, as you did to get together the numerous proclamations of Insurgent Leaders, the last three Chapters of your book would have been as valuable to futurity, as the First Edition was to the past..... am leaving this letter open that your Publishers in America may read it. Very truly yours,

New York, 13th July. York Life Insurance Company to sell all th stocks held by the corporation made a big stir to-day in the investors' world because of the uncertainty as to whether other life insurance companies would follow the same course. The big companies hold upward of $70,000,000 of stocks of railroad companies and banks, and the sudden move of the New York Life's directors made it probable that the market for the sale of stocks would be largely curtailed should insurance companies throughout the United States decline to invest in standard

From what could be learned to-day the New York: Life will not have any insurance business that the action of the New York Life competitors for some time at least in the matter of selling dividend-paying stocks. abroad. With us the lowest mortality is in England, the second lowest in Germany and the next lowest in the State of New York. This is a matter of record."

THE NEW BYE-LAW. It was on Tuesday last that the new bye-law of the New York Life was adopted. It is as

"The funds of this company shall be invested and kept invested in the following interest or income-bearing securities among those permitted by the provisions of the insurance laws of the State of New York, viz.: In bonds of the United States or of the State of New York; in bonds of any county or incorporated city in the State of New York; in bonds and mortgates on improved, unencumbered and incomeproducing real property in the State of New York, worth 50 per centum more than the amount loaned thereon; in bonds of any solvent institution incorporated under the laws of the United States or any State thereof; in bonds issued by any city, county, town, village or school district of the State of New York; in

"They may also be invested on the pledge of any of the above securities. The company may furthermore invest the funds required to meet its obligations incurred in other States of the United States or foreign countries, and in conformity with the laws thereof, in the same kind of securities in such other States or foreign countries as are provided in the laws of the State of New York. The company may also loan on the pledge of its own policies of insurance a sum not to exceed the reserve which it then holds on any such policy and bonds of any of the State of the United States.

the accumulation thereof." OTHER RESTRICTIONS.

In the matter of the restriction of investments the bye-law continues and concludes as

"But this company shall not purchase, hold or grant any mortgage loans on unimproved or non-productive property or on farms, hotels, theatres, churches, breweries, factories or mining enterprises of any description whatsoever. Neither shall this company make any loan on or investments in what are commonly known as industrial enterprises, nor shall this company, notwithstanding the permission to invest in or loan on stocks, contained in the insurance laws of the State of New York, hereafter increase its holdings in such such securities, but instead it shall annually reduce both the amount of stocks owned and the amount of stocks held as collateral security (to be evidenced by the annual statements hereafter made by this company) until, in the company's annual statement to be rendered in 1902, no item of stocks owned or of stocks held as collateral shall be included amongst its assets. Pursuant to the law of the State of New York, the company shall not acquire by purchase or otherwise any real estate except for the accommodation of its business or in satisfaction of debts due the company."

NEW YORK LIFE STOCKS.

It is the intention of the New York I directors to dispose of the stock holdings mainly to private investors, and little of the stock will go to Wall street. Among the stocks held are west preferred, Atchison preferred, Pennsylvania, Valley Railway, guaranteed by D., L and W.; American Exchange National Bank, Merchants' National Bank, National Bank of the Republic, Bank of America, Central National Bank, New York Security and Trust Company and Evansville and Terre Haute.

These stocks are all good investments, and the report of the New York Life Company to the Insurance Department shows that they were purchased at prices far below the value they now have in the open market. The officials of the Equitable Life and of the Mutual Life declined to discuss the effect on new directors would have. These was no disposition in any way to criticise the new move, FOREIGN POLICY.

Mr. William C. Van Antwerp, of Seligman and Van Antwerp, made the following statement to-day: "It is a mistake to suppose that the company's entire holdings of stocks are to be thrown on the market at once." President McCall told of life insurance funds. he was desirous of complying with the requirement of certain foreign governments under whose jurisdiction the company is doing business, and that those requirements would be best subserved by selling the company's stocks and converting the

"The entire amount of stocks owned by the "Our Finance Committee has in no way company does not exceed $4,000,000, as against an excess of $20,000,000 owned by each of the other large life companies. These stocks, moreover, are largely the preference shares of the Northwestern and the St. Paul roads, and the stocks of New York City banks and trust companies, and they will probably all be disposed of by private sale." In any event the trustees have especially provided that the sale shall be spread over a period of time extending

Mr. A. H. Meyers, the representative of the New York Life Assurance Company, informs as holders on a safer basis by the investment of President McCurdy, of the Mutual Life their funds as above. The N. Y. Life is purely mutual and is owned and controlled by the policy-holders who alone receive the profits, "The Mutual Life Insurance Company have having no share nor stock holders, and at the same time this safe basis of investiment meets the requirements of the German laws and will Mr. Hyde, further speaking for the Equitable. | be the cause of the N. Y. Life doing all the business in the Kaiser's dominious.

WHAT VITALITY MEANS.

Vitality is your measure of force, or power. Thin babies and feeble old persons have little of it. When the system is unable to assimilate the right kind of food, vitality becomes low.

Scott's Emulsion

is above all other remedies in giving vitality. It makes no difference whether the emaciated person is in babyhood or in old age. Whenever food fails to nourish, Scott's Emulsion will be found the most effective remedy for overcoming emaciated tendencies. All chemists.

THE SINKING OF THE "KOWSHING,"

the Appropriation Blll Mr. Ure called attention to the circumstances attending the loss of the British steamship Kowshing off the coast of Korea in July, 1894. The vessel was chartered by the Chinese Government to convey Chinese officers and soldiers to Korea. Shortly after she sailed war broke out between China and Japan, and when she came close to Korea she fell in with a Japanese cruiser, which fired

some shots across her how, and the captain

had no alternative but to submit to the Japanese command to surrender. The Chinese officers and men thereupon threatened that they would massacre the captain and crew if they surrendered. The Japanese cruiser then ranged up alongside, and fired a broadside into the Kowshing, with the result that several of the officers of the ship, all British subjects, were killed.

The Foreign Office having held that in in-

was made against China for compensation,

no satisfaction whatever had yet been obtained.

A New Battleship.

The Admiralty have passed plans for an entirely new class of battleship to be laid down at Devenport in November next on the slip on which the Bulwark, is now building. She has been designed by Sir W. H. Her total cost, when completed and ready for sen, is estimated at £1,150,000. Her speed will be a knot in excess of any existing British

It is proposed to bring their horsepower down to 7,500 by the substitution water-tube boilers for the Scotch boilers, and to make other changes in the interest of great economy for these vessels. To complete this work will require the attention of the Navy Yards for at least two years, but when they are again commissioned they will present far more serviceable ships then they are to-day,

After a full commission on the Mediterranean and China Stations, she has steamed 37,000 miles as a transport cruiser under the modern - system by which cruisers not otherwise required are employed to carry out relief work. The whole of that distance has been covered without the development of any, serious defect in her machinery, and this says a good deal both for the ship herself and for her successive engine-room staffs.

The Water-tube Boiler.

In view of the attacks which are still being made upon the water-tube boiler it is interesting to read that the cruisers of the A fleet performed splendidly during the war. According to the prophets, they ought to have come back to port in a disabled condition, with their boiler and enginercom staff in a condition of panic. Instead of that, they have returned fit for any work after some of the hardest steaming. Yet the bias against the water-tube in certain quarters is such that even this practical argument does not convince.

The Naval Manouvres. The mimic war in the naval manœuvres has been won by the B fleet Admiral Domyile's squadron having secured the safety of the convoy of slow ships, the protection of which was its, object, and therefore gained the victory The convoy has been brought safely into Milford Haven. The objective of the manœuvres was a convoy of British ships coming from Nova Scotia. The admiral commanding the B fleet had the advantage of knowing the exact point in the Atlantic where he could find this convoy to afford it protection. Consequently, although he could not leave Milford Haven for nineteen hours after the declaration of war he wasable to proceed without delay to the effective. FRANCO-RUSSIAN RELATIONS.

VIEWS OF A DIPLOMATIST. BERLIN, August 8th. The Tageblatt publishes from St. Petersburg to-day an interview with a retired Russian Diplomatist of distinction whose view, it thinks, coincides in all essentials with those of Count

Mouraviest. More impartial observers will doubtless be struck by the faithfulness with which the statements of the Tageblates informant reflect the opinions of German Diplomacy.

"We Russians," he observes, "can offer France no more than a guarantee that we will not permit an attack to be made on her in Europe. Unfortunately, this guarantee is useless to France in non-European questions. In these deleat after defeat threatens her, since Great Britain is well aware that the Franco-Russian will not spare France wherever she opposes

"We Russians are too much occupied by the tremendous problems awaiting us in our own land and in Asia to afford France any support outside Europe. Moreover, our policy is opposed to every kind of adventure. In the past year or two the most monstrous projects involving the complete upsetting of the present order of Europe have been laid before us in all seriousness by French Statesmen and Generals, and have caused us grave misgivings as to the wisdom of relying in any sense on a State whose affairs are guided by political brains of this character.

"There is no doubt that our feelings to-day towards the Republic, which reels through the political world like a lost comet and may at any moment be the cause of nameless evil, are considerably cooler than was the case three or

In conclusion the Tageblatt's informant argues that Russia can only rejoice at the indications of an intention on the part of France to abandon the idea of "revanche," At the same time he does not believe in a remote possibility of an alliance between France and Germany, and he interprets the inclination of the Republic to seek support in Germany as the "first sign of the extreme exhaustion of-her State organism."

The Berlin ress comments but little on the toasts that passed between Count Mouravieff and his French guest on Saturday. Several papers note the fact that the speech of the Russian Foreign Minister did not exceed the limits of conventional courtesy.

None the less, the Vossische Zeitung is inclined to think that M. Delcasse's answer is couched in the tone of one who has succeeded in accomplishing something.

How well pleased the Emperor William is with the manner in which the Diplomatic relations of Germany with France have been conducted during the trying period of the Dreyfus crisis is illustrated by the announcement published to-night that he has conferred on Count Münster the title of Prince.

THE FAR EAST IN PARLIAMENT

GREAT BRITAIN AND CHINA. August 5th. On the order for the second. reading of the Appropriation Bill, Sir C. Dilke

with China, and the future of that country, was of more importance than the South African question. The arrangement which had been made with Russia affected only the Yangtsze Valley and -Manchuria, and took no account of those enormous and important positions of the Yangtsze and Manchuria. Even the northern, part of the Yangtsze Valley was not included in the arrangement, and, therefore, it did not' even preserve our interests in the Valley as a whole. Still less did it guarantee our position in this intermediate country, which included Peking, and which, as Lord Salisbury and the late Under Secretary had told them, contained the most important concessions that had been granted to British subjects in China." He wished to know what were the present relations of this country with the Chinese Government in reference to the concessions granted in the province of Shan-si, which was within this intermediate region. Last session Lord Salisbury and the late Under-Secretary spoke of these concessions as most valuable and of granting of them as one of the principal privileges to the people of this country that the Government had secured. He wished to know whether matters were going on satisfactorily in that direction, and whether the Government believed that we had, under our existing arrangements, any means of protecting those interests against invasion by other interests. This intermediate district also included the German sphere of influence. The noble lord the member for York, in his book and in his speech before that House, brought forward a policy of joint action in China-of a peaccful kind, as he understood it—with the United States, Germany, and Japan. The Government replied that whatever might be the case for Japan, as regarded the United States and Germany they saw great difficulties in the way. It was said that the United States were willing enough to act with us in regard to commercial rights, but they would not, as the noble lord admitted, become entangled by promises that might in the future be inconvenient to them. With regard to Germany, the Government said it was not likely that Germany would entangle herself in China looking to the importance to her of friendly relations with Russia in Europe and to the dangers which might menace her line of frontier if she adopted an anti-Russian policy in China. He thought, however, having regard to the fact that the German sphere of influence was in this intermediate district, that the capital was there, and that we had great interests there, that without menacing Russia or any one else, and without in any way pointing to an armed occupation of the country, there might be common action between Germany and ourselves merely in defence of rights already acknowledged as existing. The province which Germany occupied was the natural outlet of the province of Shan-si: Germany had already indicated some willingness to co-operate with us, and he should be glad to know what was the policy of Her Majesty's Government with regard to this important intermediate district.

ment pressure had been applied by the Russian right hon, gentleman pronounced on the Go-Government at Peking insisting on the making vernment both for the advice which they had of a branch line to the Chinese capital.

· Lord C. Beresford believed there was no of the possibility of a railway to Peking from danger of war in China in the near future. Reserence had been made to his proposal to hin which it was announced in that House. All take over the Chinese army. He had only suggested that that army should be placed on the same footing as the Maritime Customs in China. A British bank was at the head of those Customs, and with British control over the army it would be easy to get foreign officers for and to invite other countries to invest their capital in China. When that step was takent showing that they shared our opinion if any there would be very little chance of war. He described the agreement between Russia and that the present position, of the Chinese the Chinese Government was responsible. Great Britain as nothing but a railway, agrea-

Mr. Drage said he wished more particularly to direct attention to the new reform movement in China, and to ask the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether he could give the House any information as to the attitude of Her Majesty's Government in regard to it. new-reform party had arisen in the course of the present year, and was supported all over the provinces-indeed, it was far stronger in Alliance applies only to European matters, and Ethe provinces than at Peking. Information had reached him that the Dowager-Empress, who had hitherto been strongly pro-Russian, had and uncertainty, and in some respect of peril, the right hon, gentleman would be able to say been converted and was willing to give her strong support to the new reform movement. operations in China. But he would venture on This reform movement was further supported one of the last days of the Session to cal by Japan. Information reached him that the attention to the immensely improved tone and Japanese were being solicited by the Chinese | confidence which, prevailed both in regard Government to enter into an offensive and defensive alliance with China on condition that and to the operations of the Government, and the administration should be reformed on the which had been showen by the discussions Japanese model. Now, if his information was in that House in the course of the present even approximately correct, we should find ourselves face to face with the rivalry of Japan in China.

Sir E. Ashmead Bartlett' hoped the valuable and interesting information which the hon. member had given the House might prove to be well founded. One of the main reasons forpressing for a speedy settlement of the Transvaal trouble was that, if such a settlement was not arrived at, we might next year find ourselves confronted with a Chinese crisis at the same time. There was no doubt that Russia was pressing her way forward to the northern provinces as fast as she could, and we were encouraging ourselves in a fond delusion if we supposed that our sphere of interest in the Yangisze would escape being affected by the iron grip which Russia was placing over Manchuria and the other northern provinces of China. He maintained that our only policy in China was to maintain the integrity of the empite and to insist on the removal of Russian' military and political control. It was only by working with Japan that we could hope to carry out the salvation of China.

Mr. Brodrick said: A variety of questions had been raised in regard to China, and the right hon, baronet had brought forward the question of our position in regard to certain concessions, remarking that, although by a recent agreement with Russia Manchuria was left a Russian sphere of concessions, and the Yangtsze remaind our sphere, there was a large and important strip of territory between us to which no agreement had been come to. Looking at it simply as a question of concession, and leaving the political side over for a few moments, he did not think there was any reason to complain of concessions in that sphere. A general agreement in regard to that sphere would be extremely difficult, though undoubtedly while Manchuria was the sphere where Russia was exercising practical control, equally shid in his opinion the question of our relations | the Peking Government it was supposed would allow concessions in the spheres of other Powers. So far as Her Majesty's Government were aware negotiations were proceeding satisfactorily with the powerful syndicate who had been much encouraged by surveys made and decided to extend their operations along the line of the Yangtsze, and Her Majesty's Go-Chinese Empire which lay between the vernment would be glad if they were able to persuade the Chinese Government to facilitate their operations. Their difficulty in making a report upon the other concessions which had been given up to this time was that concessionaires had hardly got to work; a great deal had been promised on paper, but at present actual results were comparatively inconsiderable. There was no reason whatever why we should regard concessions which happened to be given to some other Power in provinces with which we were not particularly connected with mistrust or concern. He was asked just now what their attitude was with regard to the Reform party in China. Well, a reformed administration in China was probably an administration that commended itself to every man in this country. One thing was quite certain, however, we could not expect to remove in a few weeks all the encrusted traditions of centuries with regard to official effort I in China, and he thought we were lucky if we found other nations in provinces with which we were not immediately connected who would bear their share in opening up China, which was not likely to be a work of great ease

or one entirely unaccompanied by danger to those who undertook it. A much more important point which had been raised was that of was almost impossible for a Power to say that for the hundredth interest, which lay in Asla.

it would engage in hostilities. (Hear, hear.)

Therefore, he thought, while we might appear very often to be proceeding alone in these.

matters, we were very often voicing the opinion of more Powers than appeared on the surface.

In that respect he should like to say one word

our possible co-operation with Germany in Minister. Unhappily his illness was prolonged. Then Lord Salisbury decided to regard to provinces which were not in the special sphere of any Power. The whole quesconsult the law officers of the Crown, but tion of alliances as regarded China was one absolutely nothing was done and paralysis seemed to have seized on the Government. which was always cropping up, and on which those who advocated alliances took different His (Mr. Ure's) complaint was that excuse after views. His noble friend behind him wished excuse had been made, and we were no nearer an alliance of four Powers, and he had made a settlement than we were five years ago. He strongly complained of the dilatory action of eloquent speeches. His right hon, friend opposite referred to an alliance for this purpose the Foreign Office in the matter. They laid with Germany, (Sir C. Dilke said he used no themselves open, he said, to the gravest charge such word as alliance.) Everybody was now anxious to discard the word alliance-(laughter) -and he agreed. He thought that 'very often with regard to alliances they might say, what the Greek said of women—that the best were those that were least talked about. (Hear, hear, laughter.) His hon, friend the member for Sheffield did speak of an alliance with apan. Taking the question as regarded Germany, he thought we might look forward in many parts of the world-in more than one part of the world, anyhow-to good results from friendly co-operation with Germany. He did not see what was the divergent interest between ourselves and Germany in these matters. (Hear, hear.) No doubt we were both great manufacturing nations, and we were rivals in that respect, but on the other hand we were, or ought to be, partners in the desire to open up and to keep open all parts of the globe to our manufacturers. That was a great identity of interests. The point which must divide us in regard to China was that we ourselves had a comparative immunity in any co-operation we might agree upon, because we had no land frontier on which our neighbours might operate, whereas, in the case of a Continental Power which entered into agreements or arrangements of this character in China they had to consider that even if they were not intended as a menace to any-particular Power, as the right hon, gentle-

that could be brought against any Britis Administration, that, with a righteous cause and an undivided and robust public opinion behind them, they deliberately turned their backs on the wrongs of British subjects at the hands of a foreign State. Mr. Brodrick said the hon, gentleman charged the Government with very belated action in this matter, but he thought it was only fair that he should remind the hon, gentleman that his action in bringing this matter forward at the last moment of the Session was a little belated also. (Hear, hear.) It was quite true that this claim was made five years ago, on July 25, 1894. The hon, gentleman had given a not altogether inaccurate, history of what occurred; but the truth was that the hon, gentleman had himself given the answer to his own speech when he said that it took a considerable time to decide whether by international law the claim should be made on the Japanese or on the Chinese Government, and although Her Majesty's Government came to the conclusion that the Chinese Government in the circumstances were responsible, that view was not shared by the Chinese Government. With regard to the delay, he did not think that the action of Her Majesty's Government in relation to the Chinese Government ought to be judged few years the Government had had to address. the Chinese Government on a very considerable number of subjects, and they had he thought. obtained fair satisfaction in most cases. On this subject long delay had taken place and he very much regretted it. Her Majesty's Government had, however, recently proposed to the 'Chinese Government that if they were not prepared to recognise the justice of the claim they should submit it to arbitration. Though they expected to receive a favourable answer to that auggestion, they had not yet received one; but things had not run quite so smbothly for him. Laterament was made to Her Majesty's Govern with regard to the slight consure which the they had informed the Chinese Government that they could not wait indefinitely for the settlement of the claim or for-a reply as to tendered to the Chinese Government in respect | arbitration, and that if they could not see their way to submit the matter to arbitration the claim would be treated as one which must be dealt with in some other way. (Hear, hear.)

It was very easy to speak strongly about the inaction of the Government, but if it was desired to push the claim at once forcible measures He thought it not impossible that the right | might have to be taken, and he did not understand the hon, gentleman to suggest that forcible, and by that he meant warlike, measures, should be taken with China on this matter. The Government fully hoped to obtain a settlement if on arbitration it should prove that He entirely repudiated the idea that there had been inaction on the part of the Government. On the contrary, he thought the Government had taken the proper course, and one which would end in the recognition of the claim by measures of reform which would probably the Chinese Government. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Provand asked was there any claim pending on the part of Germany, France, or l-Russia for twelve months, let alone five years. (Opposition cries of "Hear, hear,") How was it that those countries obtained satisfaction in every case, while this country never did? He honed that when the House met next February either that this matter had been settled by arbitration, and that if a decision was given against the Chinese Government, Her Majesty's Government intended to enforce it. Sir E. Ashmend-Bartlett entirely agreed with what had fallen from the hon, gentleman opposite. He contended that the result of the past methods of the Foreign Office had been to make it almost a disadvantage to be a British subject in a dispute of this kind. He admitted foreign Governments were more unscrupulous in pressing the claims of their subjects, but he thought there was room for great improvement in the general support the Foreign Office ought to give to the commercial interests of British subjects abroad. (Hear that feeling in the speeches delivered that hear.)

CHINA AND JAPAN. Sir E. Ashmead-Bartlett asked the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs whether the Russian Minister at Peking had protested against the alliance proposed between China and Japan for the purpose of establishing the independence of China and Chinese reforms, and had threatened China with most serious consequences if such an alliance be concluded; and whether China and Japan could, in face of such menaces, depend upon the support of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Brodrick; We have received no information to this effect. I am afraid I cannot state what the policy of Her Majesty's Government will be in a hypothetical case.
